TLPG Helping Visitors Find Their Way

Kokomo and Portage, Indiana

In the summer of 2008, LandPlan Group developed a wayfinding signage system for the City of Kokomo and Howard County. TLPG teamed with Baldus Co. to design vehicular wayfinding signage for use throughout the county. The team, working with Kokomo's 12-member task force, determined destinations and locations for signage. Construction drawings were completed in October, and phase one will be fabricated in the near future.

Portage Wayfinding

The Portage Economic Development Corporation recently introduced the City's new wayfinding system to the public. LandPlan Group and Baldus Co. captured the City's desire for branding its proximity to Lake Michigan. The system includes unique signage for the three districts that make up the Portage Community, and includes vehicular and trailblazer signage. Signage installation is scheduled for April 2009.

New City Park Awaits Opening Day

Fort Wayne, Indiana

Harrison Square, the newest downtown revitalization project, includes the new Robert E. Meyer City Park. LandPlan Group's role for the park project is that of designer and site coordinator. A 360-degree amphitheater stage allows for special events such as concerts and festivals. A terraced seating area to the east provides a view of the stage, and an outstanding panoramic view of the ballpark. At night, the park's water jet fountain becomes a spectacular focal feature from the ballpark's grandstand. The interactive fountain also allows park visitors, young and old, cool relief on a hot summer day. The beautifully landscaped grounds and rolling terrain provide visitors an oasis from the development's urban surroundings.

News

Starting off the new year, LandPlan Group welcomed David Weadock as a new partner to the firm. Dave, a licensed landscape architect, has been with the firm since 1998. He has managed and worked on such projects as the Harrison Square Development, Valparaiso Streetscapes, Kokomo Wayfinding and Parkview Family Park. Congratulations, Dave!
